Estyn, Her Majesty's Inspectorate for Education and Training in Wales

During each inspection, inspectors aim to answer three key questions:

Key Question 1: How good are the outcomes?

Key Question 2: How good is provision?

Key Question 3: How good are leadership and management?

Inspectors also provide an overall judgement on the setting's current performance and on its prospects for improvement.

In these evaluations, inspectors use a four-point scale:

Judgement	What the judgement means
Excellent	Many strengths, including significant examples of sector-leading practice
Good	Many strengths and no important areas requiring significant improvement
Adequate	Strengths outweigh areas for improvement
Unsatisfactory	Important areas for improvement outweigh strengths

Context

Cylch Meithrin Pencarnisiog is a Welsh-medium setting that is situated in Pencarnisiog's community hall, on the site of Pencarnisiog Primary School, Isle of Anglesey. Nearly all children who attend the setting come from the village and the nearby area.

The setting has been held in the hall since 1974 and shares the building with other agencies. The setting is open between 9am and 11am from Monday to Friday. The setting runs a lunch club between 11am and 1pm.

The setting says that nearly all children come from homes where Welsh is spoken. The children represent the full range of abilities and no children in the current group have been identified as having additional learning needs. No children come from an ethnic minority background.

The setting is registered with the Care and Social Services Inspectorate for Wales for a maximum of 16 children and it admits children from two years old. At present, 11 children attend the setting at some time during the week; three of them are three years old.

The leader has been in post since 2010. An assistant supports her. All staff have suitable qualifications.

A management committee supervises the work of the setting. The Care and Social Services Inspectorate for Wales last inspected the setting in 2012. Estyn inspected the setting in 2009.

Summary

The setting's current performance	Good
The setting's prospects for improvement	Good

Current performance

The setting's current performance is good because of the:

- good planning of learning experiences;
- balanced and interesting curriculum, which supports all the children;
- effective teaching that focuses well on the outcomes of the Foundation Phase;
- good resources that are available;
- good leadership and management;
- very good relationship between adults and children;
- good relationship and co-operation with the community; and
- the effective co-operation with external agencies, which contribute purposefully to the setting's success.

Prospects for improvement

The setting's prospects for improvement are good because of the:

- provision and clear direction to the setting's work by the leader;
- effective self-evaluation systems that correspond effectively to the clear targets in the purposeful development plan;
- positive and active attitude towards staff development and training;
- effective use of effective support lines; and
- the active and supportive work of the management committee.

Recommendations

In order to improve, the setting needs to:

- R1 Plan effective activities to develop the early writing
- R2 Improve the provision for physical development
- R3 Develop and enrich the resources and experiences in the outdoor area

What happens next?

The setting will produce an action plan that shows how it will address the recommendations.

Main findings

Key Question 1: How good are outcomes?

Not applicable

Standards: Not applicable

There is no report on children's progress, standards in the development of their skills, the Welsh language and wellbeing. This is because there were not enough relevant children present at the time of the inspection upon whom to report without identifying individual children.

Wellbeing: Not applicable

There is no report on children's progress, standards in the development of their skills, the Welsh language and wellbeing. This is because there were not enough relevant children present at the time of the inspection upon whom to report without identifying individual children.

Key Question 2: How good is provision?

Good

Learning experiences: Good

Planning satisfies the philosophy of the Foundation Phase effectively and achieves the outcomes that are identified in children's learning. The curriculum builds effectively on children's previous and current knowledge and experiences. There are interesting opportunities available to all children to develop their skills across the curriculum. However, suitable opportunities are not available to develop the children's early writing.

Appropriate time is set every week for the leader and the staff to discuss the curriculum and the theme activities. Therefore, the curriculum is flexible and linked to children's interests. Specific activities and tasks are planned thoroughly and children have freedom to choose their own tasks and activities. The learning objectives are planned and presented in detail to challenge individual children. Good activities are provided for children to develop their basic and key skills in literacy, numeracy, knowledge and understanding of the world and creative development. However, consistent opportunities are not available for the children to develop physically through adventurous play on large toys in the open air.

All adults communicate effectively with children in Welsh. Provision for developing children's information and communication technology skills (ICT) is purposeful. The staff direct children regularly to use technological equipment such as the computer and electronic toys. Children have many opportunities to develop their thinking skills through interesting activities such as role-playing in the gardening shop, experimenting with water and sand, preparing a picnic and painting.

Suitable emphasis is placed on Welsh traditions and celebrations, such as celebrating St David's Day and Saint Dwynwen's Day. Good opportunities are also provided for children to learn information and gain an understanding of other cultures and traditions, for example, through studying stories from Africa. Similar activities help children to develop a good understanding of the wider world and develop their awareness of global citizenship effectively.

Teaching: Good

Staff have good practical knowledge of children's development and a clear understanding of the requirements of the Foundation Phase. There is a very positive relationship between all staff and children. Staff have an active role in planning the curriculum and the best use is made of their expertise. Staff set clear learning objectives at the start of every focus activity to ensure that individual children are challenged appropriately in line with their abilities. Staff co-operate effectively.

All children are free to choose from activities that are led by adults or to work independently. Staff are sensible when intervening and they allow the children to develop their independent skills successfully. Staff model language well in order to develop children's thinking and communication skills. Staff encourage children to evaluate sensibly as they discuss a story and role-play.

In the building, staff provide an interesting environment that ensures successfully that all children take part and enjoy. However, the teaching in the open air is not stimulating and the outdoor area is not used purposefully.

Appropriate assessment procedures exist. The records of children's achievements are completed consistently. The assessments lead to individual children's targets and the next stages in their education. Parents and carers are informed well about their children's achievements and the information is available to them at any time.

Care, support and guidance: Good

The setting ensures that children's health and wellbeing is good. Visitors and visits extend children's experiences effectively. The setting visits the community regularly through trips to local farms and the village. The use of the village and the local area develops children's knowledge and understanding of their community effectively.

The setting has good provision for ensuring children's spiritual, moral, social and cultural development. The staff foster values such as honesty, fairness and respect sensibly. Children have good opportunities to reflect, discuss feelings, say thank you and pray. This is evident as they take turns well when eating fruit and having a drink around the dining table. The setting has the appropriate arrangements to promote healthy eating and drinking. Good opportunities are available for the children to recycle paper and plastic bottles. This begins to develop their understanding of sustainability effectively. However, challenging opportunities are not available for the children to grow plants. Therefore, the children do not learn effectively about how plants grow and how to care for the environment.

The setting's arrangements for safeguarding children meet requirements and are not a cause for concern. The setting is safe, the doors are locked and only a member of staff opens them. No-one can come in and no child can leave unaccompanied. Staff are careful as children are collected and ensure that they are in the care of their parents or a familiar carer.

Regular reviews of children's progress ensure that individuals that are suspected of needing additional support are identified. Staff discuss these with appropriate agencies. The leader is the additional learning needs co-ordinator and she is familiar with the necessary procedures in order to support children who have special needs.

Learning environment: Good

Through daily activities and the attitude that is adopted by staff, the setting promotes a positive ethos. Staff know children well and their individuality is recognised. All children have equal access to an interesting curriculum, although the lack of use of the outdoor area limits this somewhat.

The setting uses positive behaviour strategies, which removes any disruption or aggressive behaviour. The setting's staff have suitable qualifications and good experience and the adult to child ratio is favourable. Staff's expertise is used well in planning and in supervising activities.

The setting uses its resources successfully in the building to meet the requirements of the Foundation Phase and children's needs. Resources are accessible to children, which promote the children's sense of responsibility well. Resources are shared effectively between continuous and enrichment activities.

Key Question 3: How good are leadership and management?	Good
--	-------------

Leadership: Good

Staff understand their roles fully and co-operate well as a team. They use the guidance of external agencies such as the Mudiad Meithrin and the local authority sensibly. This practice ensures the best use of their expertise. The leader, staff and management committee plan purposefully to provide interesting experiences for the children.

The development plan is a useful document. Clear priorities for improvement are identified through sound self-evaluation procedures. Good processes are in place to ensure that resources are available to meet improvement objectives. Staff receive relevant and appropriate training, which has a good effect on the quality of provision.

The management committee leads effectively and gives good consideration to legislation and its management systems meet requirements. The setting gives good consideration to national priorities.

Improving quality: Good

The leader and staff know the setting well. They know what they are doing successfully and what they need to do to improve. The setting self-evaluates well. It ensures effective links between the self-evaluation and the development plan's targets.

There is sound evidence of helpful evaluations from all who are connected to the setting, such as parents and external agencies. Appropriate targets include developing ICT skills, improve the planning, create theme books, observe and assess effectively and improve links with parents. The setting evaluates areas for improvement effectively against responsibilities and timescales in the development plan.

Staff are keen to accept new ideas and to experiment with different ways of working, suggested by the local authority's advisory teacher and the Mudiad Meithrin. For example, the local authority's recommendations on how to improve the planning and assessment have affected well the quality of the learning experiences and teaching. This has a positive effect on children's learning and wellbeing.

Partnership working: Good

There is an effective relationship between the setting and parents. There is a comprehensive booklet for parents and carers, which provides them with relevant details about the setting. By the time children leave the setting, they are well prepared for the next stage in their education at school.

Links between the setting and the school are very good. As a result, children are familiar with the school's procedures before they begin full-time education. Sound and effective partnerships exist with a range of community organisations. The partnership with the Mudiad Meithrin and the local authority is good and helps the setting to progress.

Resource management: Good

Leadership is strategic and plans for the future. Resources are managed well to support learning and improvements at the setting. The leader and the management committee ensure that the setting has sufficient staff with appropriate qualifications and training. The management committee and staff use support agencies purposefully for the sake of the children.

The staff work together effectively to improve children's achievements. Sensible use is made of all the available resources. They are accessible to the children. The staff make good use of the building and the local area to provide a range of interesting learning experiences.

The provision and enthusiasm of the leadership means that the setting provides good value for money.
